Lesbian: Faith - A lesbian love story

“It’s for my niece, the woman said”, leaning over the reception desk of Kathryn’s interior design shop. “It’s going to be her birthday soon. She’ll be twenty-one. Her mother is paying, but she doesn’t know about it yet.” She tittered. Kathryn smiled at the woman and laughed politely. “Do you have anything in mind? A favorite color perhaps?” “She likes red, but you’re best off talking to her about it. I don’t want to give you the wrong information.” She laughed. “I could do with talking to her. Can you ask her to come in?” The woman glanced at her watch. “She was meant to be meeting me at twelve. Probably got carried away going around the shops. Best give her a ring.” She pulled out her phone and called her niece. “She’s on her way,” the woman announced two minutes later. Kathryn had never been great at making small talk, so found this situation a bit awkward. The woman was trying to make conversation with her, but she just didn’t know what to say. The woman was middle aged, with shoulder length dark hair. Just one or two strands of grey. It was obvious she’d been great looking a few years back. She still was, but older woman had never piqued her interest. The woman had just finished talking about the weather and was starting on her holiday plans when a red car pulled up outside. A petite young woman, dressed to kill, wearing sunglasses stepped out and closed the car door with a thud. “Here she is now. This is my niece.” “Nice to meet you,” Kathryn said, extending a hand. The woman’s niece smiled politely and shook Kathryn’s hand. Buy your copy today! Warning: This story has sexual content and may not be suitable for children under 18
