Best friends tell each other everything... right?

Sam and Louise have been best friends since they hung their coats side by side on the first day of primary school. Now in their thirties, they're still just as close, but life is a little bit more complicated ...

Sam loves running her market stall with Louise by her side. They're right at the heart of the community – and always one step ahead on local gossip. But Sam's marriage is in a bit of a rut, and handsome stranger Dan has her wondering if the grass might be greener ...

Louise is the life and soul of every party, but she's hiding a broken heart, and worries about her beautiful but secretive daughter Charley. All she wants is someone to love – but could Mr Right be just around the corner?

Just when Sam and Louise need each other most, they suddenly have reason to wonder whether they ever really knew each other at all. Can the two best friends put the past behind them, and help each other find love and happiness again?

An emotional and uplifting tale of love, secrets and the importance of having a best friend.
