Excerpts:

From How to be the Woman:

41. Never talk back to him.

42. Ask him for advice whenever you can, and always take it seriously. Asking his advice lets him see that you are dependent on his intelligence.

...

44. Flatter him like he is a king.

...

85. Exchange loving and affectionate words with him.

88. Answer first to him then to your oldest son.

From How to be the Man:

27. Never harm her or your children physically or mentally.

28. Never let them harm you.

39.

Do not apologise for every little thing.40. If you feel overwhelmed, seek her help in situations in which you know she could help.

41. Never put pride or vanity before what is best for your family.

59.

Never swear in front of her, unless you're doing so to express that she has severely displeased you. Tell her not to swear when she swears.

60. Never abuse your wife's trust.

From How to talk to Her:

The

man, as the head of the house, is to exude his authority when appropriate, and be a "gentle giant" the rest of the time. He must know that his woman needs to hear tender, affectionate words as much as she needs to hear when she's let him down. He must know when to be surly, and when to be amiable. When he is happy, his voice should be open, loud, and full of laughter. When he is angry, his voice should be deep with warning, maybe even a spine-tingling whisper.
