The Changing Day: The Final Book in a Cornish Trilogy E.M Phillips

"The Changing Day" begins in 1940, when a meeting between WREN Joanna Dunne and Navy Lieutenant Mark Eden is the start of a love affair that at first seems unlikely to stand the test of time. She is 22, single and an Oxford graduate; he is 36, married and in civilian life a country vet. She is attracted but not looking for romance, he is attracted but not looking for commitment and, as Joanna soon discovers, he is the black sheep of his family and has a very murky past. Despite her initial mistrust and his resistance, against the background of a war that ranges from a Hampshire port to the Cornish coast and from North Africa to Singapore, attraction deepens into love that in turn blossoms into a passionate affair. But can their love survive five years of separations, misunderstandings, seemingly irreconcilable family conflict, tragedy and loss and the aftermath of war?
