For over 20 years remote viewers have been hearing about the imminent arrival of global destruction through the "kill shot," a burst of solar radiation that causes massive destruction. One group of remote viewers, however, foresees imminent, regional, deadly destruction that most people will be able to escape, if they are only prepared. This summary of 150 remote viewing sessions paints a picture of non-military destruction in the Middle East and unexpected consequences of global warming not related to "climate," with 10 suggestions of how most readers can weather the crisis.
